

1 | Legal Smhegal

stories: the worm silk road

The Robert Morris Internet Worm

released a self replicating, self propogating worm which exploited the sendmail program slowed down a bunch of stuff, spread like wildfire he got convicted pretty hard why did he release it...?

Questions

1. What are the ethical choices people faced? What, if any, actions would you consider unethical? Why?
 1. Of course, Morris when releasing the worm in first place, but also
2. What, if any, actions in this story do you think should be illegal? What actions are actually illegal? Specify laws that might be relevant, even if no one was caught or prosecuted.
3. What things do you think the people involved could have done to achieve their goals while staying within legal and ethical bounds?
4. What would you consider appropriate punishment? If relevant to your story, how does that compare to the punishments that were handed down?
5. What are the technical lessons that can be learned to improve security?

1.0.1 | Silk Road

Questions

1. What are the ethical choices people faced? What, if any, actions would you consider unethical? Why?
2. What, if any, actions in this story do you think should be illegal? What actions are actually illegal? Specify laws that might be relevant, even if no one was caught or prosecuted.
3. What things do you think the people involved could have done to achieve their goals while staying within legal and ethical bounds?
4. What would you consider appropriate punishment? If relevant to your story, how does that compare to the punishments that were handed down?
5. What are the technical lessons that can be learned to improve security?